THE PARISH OF LORDON.

At Charles Crean, as I have shown be fore, you steind in the very depet of London, with the crowded Strand pouring it willitudes spice the eight. If, however you thread our of the currow passages among the houses of Spring Gardens, which are close at your left on entering Whitehall, turning to the night through the archivey of the Borns Guards, you find yourself upon grown gross and under large trees. Here can oces that chain of Parks, St. Jamei's, Green Park, Hyde Park, and Kossington Gardens, which are chiefly spoken of as the Porks of London. Regent's, Victoria, and other Parks in various quarters of the metropolis, are of later date, and have neither the historical associations mor the prestige of fashien which render these so important a feature in every shotch of London.

The four purhe first mentioned, com mencing here at Whitehall, extend west ward in an eregular line two miles and a half long, and varying in width from a quarter to three quarters of a mile, except at one or two points, where they are aimost intersected by encroaching thorough fares. Their whole area is about nine hundred seres. Bt. James' Palace and that of Whitehall stand close upon their confines, and Buckingham and Kennington Palaces within these. Other fine residences bound them in some parts, while in others they are skirted by the great arteiries of Piccadilly, Gxford street, etc.

The more mention of their size is sufficient to show that we must throw saide all notions of a park formed from the very flat little plote of a clusty green, intersected with a 'feat's cradle" web of straight walks," and milorned by scraggy trees with placards bidding all cvil disposed persons to "Keep Off the Grave," which one occasionally finds squeezed in between three cr four streets of American enties, as if nature were dying under the peins forte et dure. As little will the ordinary low benches, represent the groupe of Hyde Park. It is true that the gates stand open all day long to any pedestrian who chooses to enter. But like seeks like ; the poverty and wretchedness of London slinks away into its dens and alleys, and leaves wealth and fashion undisputed possession of their own favorite field. This is particularly true of Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens. At the city end of the line, we find some scattered spray of the great sea of vagabondism, with a sprinkling of apple stands and venders of pins and shoe-lacings-At Hyde Park corner, again, some ragged boys and men are waiting to hold a horse, or staring lietlessly at the throng. What are their thoughts as my lord's chariot with two astonishing footmen rolls by i We may trust that some of the boys have hope and energy in them to rise; but the men, poer, discouraged, shiftless, and past the time for projects and changes, what do they think of this world? Happy for them if indeed they are also past anything like real thinking at all.

These, however, are exceptions to the general air of health and good spirits and sunshiny enjoyment which seems to animate all we meet in the Park.

St. James's Park is long and narrow, with broad walks lined with fine rows of ic. That on the north is the Mail, and bounds the gardens of Carlton Piace, and Mariboro' House, and St. James's Palace. Turn and look back when you come opposite the red-coated centinel who guards the Palace gate. Two centuries ago, over the same ground you have traversed, but in the opposite direction, walked Charles I. from his palace to his scaffold at Whitshall. His son beautified and replanted the spot, and Nell Gwyn had a terrace in her garden, from which ske could overlook it. How very different in her eyes, in wars, and in those of the sentenced king, that chill January morning.

Resuming our walk westward, we approach and peer Buckingham Paince, the actual residence of the Queen, who only holds levers and receptions in the quaint old halls of St. James. We are now in Green Park ; not yet upon truly fashionaable ground, but its the milet of purpe-

The writer desires to my that these remarks are not intended to apply to the Touro Park of the city of Nawport. The picturesque taste which hald out serpentine walke over that plot of ground, should be spoken of with due appropriation. Did any of our citizens ever see an individued trying to follow but one of these remerkable universee. Streening up its own hind, ale Piscadilly from the enstward, and up Greatener Piace from the couch, come lines of carriages and groups of equantrians of both sexes. The best blood of England, in men, women and horses, are $1500. No insurance. before us ; and it must be confered that the horses were the first to excite my admiration. One may look twice at a peer without detecting his nobility; but there is no mistaking at a glance the aristocracy of homeflesh. Before pussing the gates, let us look one moment at the vicinity. Towering over our beads, on a triumphal arch, is the equestrian statute of Wellington, allowed by all to be the worst ever executed .- at the Providence Mutual. How the Iron Duke permitted such a wooden caricature of himself to be placed $400. No insurance that we could learn of directly before his windows, I cannot imagine. The corner building on our right is Apaley House, his own mansion : not unlike the State House in a poor but ambitious young American State in its general effect. Beyond it is Lord Filden's Capt. E. H. Rodes' estate, Capt. Shejhouse, and then "old Q's," and the residence where Byron went to homekeeping: beyond that, again-but it is time to pursue our way into Hyde Park.

Hackney coaches and other plebeian vehicles are sealously excluded from these genteel precints. Hyou would enjoy the drive you must patronize one of the West End stable keepers, who, for a sovereign, will send you into the park with such a "stunning" turn-out, servants in livery included, that the country folks and newlyimported Yankees on the walk will take you for an Earl at the very least. Do not flatter yourself, however, that you are deceiving the habitues of any class. They will see nice distinctions in the equipage that are hidden from your unpractical eye, and will know you for a stranger as readily as they know the dowdy old woman in an untediluvian barouche just behind you, with the sleek horses and the obese coachman. for a dutchess. A pleasanter way to enjoy the Park, is on horseback. Do not attempt this, however, unless you have great confidence in your horsemanship. There is no danger of a fall from such finely-trained saddle horses, but you will find yourself in a throng of the best riders of dotte sides with spectators; and it is net pleasant to go painfully and awkwardly joiting along while greybeard states men and Right Honorable young ladies glide gracefully by you.

AN IRISH GENEALOGY OF QUEEN VIC-TORIA .- The descent of Victoria of England, can be plainly traced to Fergus, youngest son of Erc, an Irish Dalriadan Prince of Ulater, of the race of Heremon, who, in A. D. 504, emigrated to Albion, (now Scotland,) laid there the fountain of the Stuart dynasty, and was inaugurated on the indentical L'a Fall, or stone of deatiny, on which Her Majesty became an anointed queen. To Married Ladies.

To Dr. Mattison's Indian Emmenadouve is a new and elegant medicine designed expressly for females. It is pre, ared from an Indian plant which has been used by the natives for the same purpose from time immemorial, and is now for the first time offered to the public. The name and virtues of this wondrous plant was obtained from Skemandouh, an Oneida Chief who lived near Skytacuse, New York, to a very great age.
It is neatly put up in two outcos bottles with full directions for using, and is warranted to cure any case of obstruction of the Monthly Sickness—often in 24 hours, and that too after other remedies have been tried in vain.
This may seem incredible, but if it failin any case the price will be refunded. It will also prevent obstructions from any cause whatever, if taken for a day or too before the monthly period, and is therefore of the greatest value to married ladies wishing to avoid the accidents to which they are inable. It is also the most valuable Female Restorative ever discovered for pale and delicate females with deranged mentruation, ast a preedily resures
